Reflections

On the 2018 HNGR Symposium

Dr. Jamie Huff | HNGR Assistant Professor

The 2018 Wheaton College Symposium in Human Needs and Global Resources (HNGR), entitled For the Healing of the Nations: Global Health and the Environment, was a unique, collaborative endeavor that was co-hosted by the HNGR Program and the Biology Department. This joint Symposium convened leading researchers and health practitioners to consider the resolve, vision, leadership, and expertise of diverse individuals and organizations working to improve human health and to combat environmental injustice in communities around the world. Symposium participants included scientists, medical practitioners, and human rights and environmental justice advocates whose professional work focuses on comprehending and confronting the environmental conditions that impact peoples' health vulnerability, resilience, and their access to effective health systems. The event included presentations that gave special attention to the themes of health and climate change, nutritional ecology, environmental injustice, and rural poverty and profiled the work of organizations that partner with communities located in west Africa, Central America and the southern United States. Symposium presenters highlighted the efforts of grassroots community development, health organizations, and advocacy campaigns that confront the local and global environmental factors that impact the physical, mental, and social well-being of people in these communities.

The HNGR program and the Biology Department hosted three remarkable leaders from Latin America and the United States, who inspired the Wheaton community with several informative lectures and practice-oriented workshops. Joining us for the Symposium was Ms. Catherine Coleman Flowers, who serves as the founder of Alabama Center for Rural Enterprise (ACRE) and the Rural Development Manager for the Equal Justice Initiative, and who currently directs the Environmental Justice and Civic Engagement Division at Union Theological Seminary's Center for Earth Ethics. Our guests from Latin America included Drs. Francisco Moraga and Reyna Sanchez, who work as family care physicians and are the co-directors of Luke Society Nicaragua, a faith-based organization that provides community health education and organizes public health initiatives in numerous marginalized communities across Nicaragua. Finally, Wheaton College and HNGR alumna Dr. Rebecca Heidkamp, who is faculty member at the Johns Hopkins University Bloomberg School of Public Health, joined us to share about her work on developing evidence-driven public health nutrition policies and programs in low- and middle-income countries.

The Symposium began with a public lecture delivered by Drs. Vanya Koo and Kristen Page (Biology Department faculty) on Tuesday, March 13, that explained the relationship between public health and environmental change and featured presentations on original field research conducted by three Wheaton College undergraduate students, including two HNGR interns (Sean Lyon and Laura Pax). The first full day of activities on Wednesday, March 14, included a Chapel address by Dr. Rebecca Heidkamp and a variety of panel and breakout sessions in the afternoon during which our three Symposium guests shared about their professional work as medical doctors, public health researchers, and community organizers with a diverse audience of Wheaton College students. Approximately one hundred Wheaton College faculty, staff, and students attended discussion-based, breakout sessions hosted by Drs. Moraga and Sanchez, Dr. Heidkamp, and Ms. Coleman Flowers. That same evening Ms. Coleman Flowers delivered the Science Symposium plenary address during which she described the work she directs with the Alabama Center for Rural Enterprise, which focuses on advocating for access to clean water and proper sanitation on behalf of marginalized households in Lowndes County, Alabama.

The HNGR Symposium continued with a timely and informative plenary address by Drs. Reyna Sanchez and Francisco Moraga, Health, Environment, and Climate Change in Latin America, on Thursday evening, March 14. The joint address included an opening lecture by Dr. Sanchez that detailed the particular ecological and health vulnerabilities of different rural communities in Nicaragua and elsewhere in Central America. Her address offered concrete examples of how climate change in the region has exacerbated problems of clean water access and susceptibility to certain vector-borne diseases in the communities where San Lucas Nicaragua carries out various public health and community development initiatives. The presentation also identified the strategies that public health professionals are adopting to strengthen community resilience in the face of adverse climate change. Dr. Moraga closed the plenary address with a set of moving reflections on the calling that we have as followers of Jesus to care for Creation and to work for the flourishing and well-being of neighbors living nearby and far away who are vulnerable to climate change. Following the plenary address we hosted approximately one hundred guests in the lobby of the Meyer Science Hall for the HNGR Interns Poster Session – the poster session continued late into the night with nearly seventy-five guests sticking around to learn from and query students about the independent study projects they carried out during the course of their HNGR internships.

A notable activity during this year's Symposium was a community art project facilitated by Associate Lecturer of Art, Leah Samuelson, and a group of undergraduate students from the Art Department. The project was held during the course of the entire Symposium event and invited all guests and participants to contribute to the creation of a mosaic of the HNGR logo (the mosaic was installed in the HNGR office in May 2018). In all, approximately one hundred individuals contributed to the creation of the mosaic.

On Friday, March 16, the HNGR interns led the entire community in a worship service as part of the weekly Chapel service. That afternoon the program hosted a closing workshop with staff from a local organization, Faith in Place. Approximately twenty-five Wheaton College students attended the workshop to learn about the practical steps they could take to mobilize the Wheaton College community in Creation Care and environmental stewardship work. To end this year's Symposium, we hosted approximately seventy-five guests, including Wheaton faculty, staff, students and HNGR alum for a Saturday morning brunch and a closing address by various HNGR staff, including Drs. Laura Yoder, Jamie Huff, and Mandy Kellums Baraka. 🍀

STEPHAN RAUH | HNGR '13
FORMER LUKE SOCIETY INTERN

How good it was to be with Francisco and Reyna again for the 2018 HNGR symposium! The time together was significant for me in a number of ways. It was fun to laugh, share memories, and recount God's goodness together. Even beyond the good fun of being together and the joy of reminding one another of God's faithfulness, I was blessed again by their deep witness to God's redeeming, transformative work.

They shared powerful words about God's Kingdom and of opportunities they have to accompany Latin American communities in pursuit of greater health and well-being in the midst of global climate change. The approach they take in their development work, strengthening leadership within communities and encouraging community members to work together to identify problems and move toward greater well-being, is a deep encouragement to me and a strong example for me as I go about my work.

For years, Francisco and Reyna have invested significant energy to welcome and include HNGR students in their work at Fundación San Lucas. They do so with patience and kindness, embracing interns as part of their team. It was fun to witness their genuine excitement at the opportunity to visit Wheaton and to share with the Wheaton community. What a rich blessing it was to hear from Francisco and Reyna, to be with these dear friends again, and to receive encouragement through their work, their witness, and their love. Thanks be to God!

2018 HNGR COVENANT

The creation of the HNGR Covenant is an important part of students' pre-departure reflection. At their winter retreat, the outgoing group thinks and prays about what they hope God will accomplish in and through their group, and what qualities or practices they hope to characterize their internships. Through a visioning process, the interns find two or three themes to work into a HNGR Covenant. This prayerful statement of intentionality serves as a guidepost for their individual internship as well as a touchpoint by which to share with each other about their different experiences. Below is the 2018 HNGR Covenant. We encourage you to use it as a resource for your own reflection and as you pray for the 2018 interns.

Lord God, in our rising and lying down,
and in our coming and going, remember us,
the HNGR interns, and hear our prayer.

Faithful God, you are Creator and Redeemer of our stories. Allow us to enter in the broken stories that you faithfully redeem.

Father, hear our prayer.

Compassionate God, you share in our suffering and turn our mourning into dancing. Help us to be a community who weeps with those who weep, and rejoices with those who rejoice.

Holy Spirit, hear our prayer.

Sovereign God, you liberate us from our fears and burdens. Give us the courage to be vulnerable with each other and stand alongside one another.

Jesus, hear our prayer.

Loving God, you became flesh and established your Kingdom among us.
Help us to be humble participants in your Kingdom story.

Holy Trinity, hear our prayer.

Abide in us as we wait for you.

Amen.

CHIEF PROGRAM OFFICER

The Chief Program Officer oversees all services provided by Lawndale Christian Legal Center's Legal Team, Case Management Team, Outreach Team, MAC House, Mentoring, Restorative Justice Hub, and Detention Reduction Program, ensuring the cohesive integration and delivery of our team-based model of services. The Chief Program Officer will join a growing team of executive leaders at LCLC to play a critical role in the execution of our Chicago Beyond award and rigorous evaluation with the University of Chicago Urban Labs. As an organization, we are in a season of growth that requires us to develop our model of services such that we are able to equip and train other communities in Chicago to implement these services in their neighborhoods. During this season, it is critical that the Chief Program Officer facilitate the collection and analysis of data from the various departments so that, in partnership with Urban Labs, we can determine critical interventions, length of interventions, and the overall impact and cost of our services, particularly in comparison to traditional forms of criminal justice interventions. We are looking for a high-level executive leader with non-profit management experience; strong management, organizational, and administrative skills; and experience in collecting and analyzing data to inform model delivery of services as well as replication and scaling of those services. This position reports directly to LCLC's Executive Director.

7TH TRIENNIAL CONSULTATION

INTEGRAL MISSION AND RESILIENT COMMUNITIES

ADDRESSING POVERTY, INJUSTICE AND CONFLICT

THE PHILIPPINES

10TH to 14TH September 2018

The media tends to focus on sudden large disasters, yet miss the profound reality that a majority of people who die unnecessarily each year, die from local events and systems that don't reach our news reports. Those most adversely affected are from poor and often marginalised communities, who have received limited-to-no support. Compounding this problem is the ever-reducing availability of resources (international and national) that can be drawn on for the meeting of basic life-saving needs. Even when aid is supplied, building the community capacity to become more resilient for future shocks is limited. Unjust systems continue to be the cause of poverty cycles, death and conflict.

RESILIENCE

The ability to recover quickly from difficulties, the ability to cope with the life shocks and challenges.

RESILIENT COMMUNITIES

The sustained ability of a community to draw on available resources to withstand, respond to and recover from adverse situations.

MICAH AND INTEGRAL MISSION

Recognising that a reconciled community has the greatest capacity to work together for the healing and restoration of its people, we centre our mission in Christ, so that all we do and say has a transforming impact, enabling communities to live life in all its fullness, free from poverty, injustice and conflict.

Visa processing often takes time. Please apply early. Remember if you are travelling through the USA or the EU you may require a transit visa.

INSURANCE: All participants are required to have their own appropriate health insurance. Micah has a contract with Dr Walter Health Insurance and can issue health insurance cover for the event on request. This usually will cost €2.50/day. Payment of health insurance can be done on arrival. If you would like to use this please contact Micah for details.

HEALTH ADVICE: A number of mosquito-borne diseases are prevalent in the Philippines all year round. Precaution (clothing, repellent etc.) to avoid mosquito bites is advised.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND?

Micah seeks to create a platform for Christians ministries to meet, share and consult one another on relevant global and contextual issues and concerns, through the lens of integral mission.

This global consultation is important and relevant for all those involved in the theology and practice of missional transformation through relief, rehabilitation, development, advocacy, reconciliation, environmental care and justice ministries.

It is often around the tables at meals and other connecting times that the best collaboration occurs. Organisations have changed their entire strategy after participating in a Micah Consultation – so come prepared to be inspired, challenged and changed. Come to share your experiences and knowledge so that others can learn from you.

WHY SHOULD YOU ATTEND?

At the heart of Micah is our passion for integral mission. Christian ministries coming to learn together how we can:

- Effectively respond to the travesty of poverty, injustice and conflict in such a way that God's Shalom is evident in word, deed and signs?
- Discern theologically and practically together to speak and act with prophetic authority so as to disciple our nations and hold leaders to account for their responsibilities for the flourishing of humanity and all of creation?
- Walk together in humility, serving one another as we seek to enable the local church to be the agent of change in each community?
